The person who influences me the most is my aunt Mrs. S. Scott- Brown. She influences me by taking time out and just talking to me.

Mrs. Brown is a citizen of Gary Indiana. She has 2 daughters, 1 son, 6 grandchildren, 1 smart dog, and 1 husband. Mrs. Brown is a strong believer of God and attends St. Peters Church in Gary, Indiana. She is 5 feet tall and has a very powerful spirit and an even more powerful voice. Her distinctive laughter could turn head of thousands of people.

Her rich brown skin (is said to have capture her husband) is silky smooth. She has deep brown eyes that if you stare to long you might begin to daze. Mrs. Brown loves to wear comfortable clothes, such as skirts, jeans and dresses with a youthful flare. She loves to read and write.

Mrs. Scott-Brown began my idol when I really began to know her as a friend instead of just an aunt. After my mom and I had a disagreement my aunt called to talk to me. She called to calm me anger. Being that we were not that close then I felt repelled to talk to her. She was understanding of where I stood and began to talk to me as if she was one of my closest friends. She started talking about how her and her mom and telling stories that I thought she would never tell. So I lightened up a little bit and began to talk to her. She told me that a mother is most important in a young girls or an adult's life. We had a long conversation about irrelevant things to relieve the anger. When she thought I had calm all the way down she asked me if I wanted to talk about what had happened. After we were done talking she asked me to stay in touch with her. We talk every Saturday.

My aunt makes me feel like someone in the world loves me more than my sister, my mom and myself. When I see here it lightens up my day. She loves and it obvious to see. That is why Mrs. Scott- Brown is my role model.
